WAS STABBED TO DEATH

Artful Was Seaten Unarmedly and Taken to a Field Near Alexandria, Va., and a Knife Thrust into His Throat—Robbery Was the Motive.

Washington, March 18.—The mystery surrounding the death of Walter F. Schultz, a Chicago artist, whose body was found on March 9 near Alexandria, Va., near Washington, was cleared up at a preliminary examination of four negro suspects. One of the corpses, Chicago artist.

According to his story, Schultz, who

Two or three days ago the Alaskan State police arrested Henry Smith, Richard Pines, James Dorsey and Calvin Johnson, known as "bad" negroes. Smith confessed.

Smith says that on the evening of May 10, he and Smith, on a street corner, surrounded by Pines, Dorsey and Johnson, and heard Schultz say: "My God, don't do me that way." He approached the group, and when he inquired what the men were doing, he saw a pistol in the face, with a demand that he join.

Then one of the negroes threw Schultz overboard over the artist's head and he was picked up by all four, who started for a lonely field, where

Smith said a cloth was placed around Schnitz's neck and Dorsey thrust a knife into the victim's throat. Schnitz's pockets were searched, and it was thought best not to take all the money, Smith said, so that it would appear robbery was not the motive.

On cross-examination the negro said that Schutte had been beaten unmercifully, and the artist was helpless when carried into the Seid where he was killed.

Schutte's parents reside in Chicago. He had travelled extensively. A letter from a sister was found in his pocket and this led to the identification of the body.
